A – Conditions d’Accès

Pourront être admis à cette formation, et selon les possibilités d'accueil du département d'anglais, les étudiants ayant obtenu une licence académique en langue anglaise.

B - Objectifs de la formation

The main goals of this MA are:

- 1- Develop good research skills through reading, discussion and critique of research articles on various relevant to the component modules of the syllabus; the research skills modules are given importance to prepare learners for academic research (MA, PhD and post doctoral).
- 2- Develop deeper knowledge and skills for English language teaching by discussing learning theories, teaching methods and the teaching of key language skills;
- 3- Develop English proficiency: The learners are expected to reach at least a high intermediate level in English; Such proficiency is required for both teaching and research purposes;
- 4- Develop academic modesty, tolerance and ethical attitudes that should allow learners to be agents of development in their environment; and
- 5- Develop critical thinking which is especially necessary to thrive in the 21st century.

At the end of this program, the learners are expected to demonstrate both declarative and procedural knowledge of the above requirements. As much as possible, they will be asked to perform the skills covered; the preparation and then defense of a research thesis is the main performance test to demonstrate their research skills.

C – Profils et compétences métiers visés

- 1. Good research skills to prepare learners for academic research (MA, PhD and post doctoral);
- 2. Good knowledge and skills necessary for teaching English language;
- 3. High intermediate level in English required for both teaching and research purposes;

This course aims at providing students as future teachers with a psychological framework to help them make the connections between different aspects of the learning process and make informed decisions about what to do on their classrooms. In addition, the course aims at providing students as future teachers with different existing methodologies in relation to the teaching of English as a foreign language. All the above objectives, when fulfilled will help students grasp better the rest of the modules suggested in their learning programme.

2. Skills and Knowledge Pre-requisites:

Students are expected to have some prior knowledge in the field of didactics, psychopedagogy and applied linguistics.

3. Outline of the Content

Week	Course	Student's personal work
1	Meeting the learners and explaining the objectives of the course.	Reading about the Positivist and cognitivist school in educational psychology
2	Modern Behaviourism (B.F. Skinner) Information Processing and Intelligence (Gardner's Multiple Intelligences).	Reading about Constructivism and Humanism in educational psychology
3	Constructivism (Piaget-Bruner and Kelly) Humanism (Erikson and Maslow)	Reading about Humanism and Social Interactionism in educational psychology
4	Humanism (Rogers) Social Interactionism (Vygotsky and Feuerstein)
5	A Brief History of Language Teaching (ancient to medieval- 18th c- 19th to 20th c) Difference between Approach- Method and Technique	Read about the Grammar Translation Method and the Direct Method
6	Grammar Translation Method Direct Method	Read about Situational Language Teaching and Audiolingualism

1. Objectives: This course is intended as an introduction to the field of Comparative Education, it can be seen as a kind of intellectual history of the field, with the different schools or approaches presented in a roughly chronological way. The intention is to trace changing approaches to Comparative Education research over time, and link debates over methodology to wider debates in the literature of the social sciences. Students are encouraged to focus their attention on such fundamental questions as the purpose of Comparative Education, the views of social change that underlie different approaches to Comparative Education and the question of what "scientific" methodology entails and whether or not it should be a goal in Comparative Education research.

2. Outline of the Content

Introduction: The Origins and early development of Comparative education

1. The Historical Approach

2. The Positivist Approach

3. Phenomenological, Ethnographic & Narrative Approaches

4. The Problem Approach

5. The Developmental Approach: Neo-Marxism, Dependency Theory and World Order thinking

Objectifs de l'enseignement :

Ce module vise à préparer les futurs enseignants/ chercheurs à la vie professionnelle d'enseignement et de la recherche. Les objectifs se résument à :

1. Permettre aux futur enseignants/ chercheurs d'assimiler les avantages et les désavantages de chaque modèle théorique de la compréhension écrite.
2. Pouvoir évaluer les manuels scolaires qui traitent de la compréhension écrite.
3. Pouvoir synthétiser, selon le besoin des futurs apprenants, le savoir acquis pour établir une méthode d'enseignement efficace.
4. Initiation à la recherche dans le domaine.

Connaissances préalables recommandées :

Les étudiants doivent avoir un bon niveau en Anglais comme langue étrangère.

Les étudiants doivent avoir une bonne maîtrise des stratégies de la compréhension écrite.

Etre capable de rechercher, d'exploiter la documentation dans la spécialité convenablement.

Contenu de la matière:

(Fiche de lecture à préparer par chaque étudiant sur le cours suivant)

1. Definition of L2 reading

- 1.1 The reader
- 1.2 The text
- 1.3 The interaction between the reader and text

2. Theoretical models of the reading process

- 2.1 The Schema Theory Model
- 2.2 The Bottom-Up Model
- 2.3 The Top-Down Model
- 2.4 The Interactive Model

3. Main reading strategies

- 3.1 Preparing to read
- 3.2 Reading the text
- 3.3 Reviewing reading:

4. Factors influencing L2 reading

- 4.1 Cognitive development
- 4.2 The influence of reading performance and competence in L1
- 4.3 Metacognitive knowledge
- 4.4 L2 proficiency
- 4.5 Cultural orientations.

5. Designing the reading course

- 5.1 Course objective
- 5.2 Approaches to teaching reading.
- 5.3 Selecting appropriate materials
- 5.4 Evaluation and final course grade

6. Planning the reading lesson

- 6.1 Components of a lesson plan
- 6.2 factors that influence planning
- 6.3 From plan to syllabus to curriculum.

7. Vocabulary issues in teaching reading

- 7.1 Vocabulary before reading.
- 7.2 Vocabulary during reading.
- 7.3 Vocabulary after reading.

8. Using literature

- 8.1 Reasons for using literature.
- 8.2 features of literary text
- 8.3 adjusting methods to literary texts
- 8.4 criteria for selecting literary text

9. Assessing L2 reading.

- 9.1 traditional methods of testing reading
- 9.2 alternative methods for assessing reading
- 9.3 writing tests for the classroom
- 9.4 planning course-level assessment

10. Reading – writing relationship: L2 issues

- 10.1 The L2 reading-writing relationship
- 10.2 transfer of L1 literacy skills to L2.
- 10.3 using background reading texts in writing.
- 10.4 The role of extensive reading in promoting students' writing performance.

1. Course Objectives: By the end of S1 and S2, students will be able to:

1. Recognize theoretical aspect related to L1 and L2 grammar acquisition and implications in EFL grammar classrooms.
2. Bridge the gap (attempt) between theory and practice through an investigation of language teaching methodology in its theoriless and theoretically grounded aspects. They also tackle contemporary EFL grammar instruction/ pedagogy focusing on the shift from method to approach.
3. Understand the teaching and learning styles through an analysis of real-life syllabuses and an experience of: inductive / deductive grammar lessons, implicit / explicit ones in addition to grammar in context.
4. Plan grammar lessons informed by selected approaches and present projects on lesson plans.
5. Know how to test grammar, design different types of tests and various assessment procedures with diverse criteria. Deal with grammar errors of real-life material and recognize the value of accuracy, fluency and teachers' corrective feedback.
6. Embrace technological tools in EFL grammar learning and integrate ICT in lesson preparation, presentation and tutoring as to meet the requirements of the reforms.

2. Pre-requisite knowledge: * knowledge in morpho-syntax and theories of language acquisition
* power point and technological requirements
* social / communicative skills

3. Course Contents:

1. Theories of L1 and L2 grammar acquisition: behaviorism, innatism (+universal grammar) and (socio) constructivism
2. Language teaching methodology: from method to approach.
3. Grammar in syllabuses:

Intitulé de la matière: Academic Reading

Crédits: 02 Coefficients: 01

1. Course objectives

This course cultivates skills to improve academic reading performance for non-native speakers of English. Special attention is given to cross-disciplinary academic reading, reading rates and speeds, effective research methods, documentation and essay exams skills. This course is designed to raise students' reading skills so they can participate in academic settings

2. Student Learning Outcomes

By the completion of this course, students will be able to

1. Comprehend academic vocabulary, academic texts, and various forms of assessment from exams and exercises to reports and collaborative research
2. Synthesize, quote, summarize and paraphrase academic texts using correct documentation style sheets
3. Organize, develop, revise, and edit during essay exams
4. Practice and demonstrate effective group interaction skills as they apply to written and oral communication in academic settings.

3. Textbooks

Intitulé de la matière: Cognitive Psychology

Crédits: 01 Coefficient: 01

1. Course Objectives:

- 1- Introduced to historical development of cognitive psychology
- 2- Be able to acquire a background in the theories and research that define the areas of cognitive psychology.
- 3- Be able to define the terms memory and cognition. Understand what types of mental activities are involved in these two processes.
- 4- To gain a general knowledge on basic cognitive processes such as perception and categorization of information, attention and language acquisition.
- 5- To appreciate the contribution of cognitive psychology to understand higher mental processes such as problem solving and reasoning
- 6- To understand individual differences in cognitive functions

2. Course Contents:

I. The Science of Cognition

- 1.1 The History of Cognitive Psychology
- 1.2 Information Processing;
- 1.3 Organization of the Brain
- 1.4 Methods in Cognitive Neuroscience

II. Areas of cognitive psychology

- 2.1 Perception
- 2.2 Attention and Performance
- 2.3 Representation of Knowledge
- 2.4 Human Memory: Encoding and Storage
- 2.5 Human Memory: Retention and Retrieval
- 2.6 Problem Solving
- 2.7 Reasoning
- 2.8 Individual Differences in Cognition

III. Language and cognition

- 3.1 Language and the Brain
- 3.2 Language and Thought
- 3.3 Language Acquisition
- 3.4 Language Comprehension
- 3.5 language acquisition and text processing

3. Mode d'évaluation : Examen

1. Course Objectives: This course introduces the practices and principles of interpersonal communication in both dyadic and group settings. Emphasis is on the communication process; issues addressed include perception, listening, self-disclosure, speech apprehension, ethics, nonverbal communication, conflict, power, and dysfunctional communication. Upon completion, students should be able to demonstrate interpersonal communication skills, apply basic principles of group discussion, and manage conflict in interpersonal communication situations.

1. Students will demonstrate effective communication with their peers by:

- a. explaining the principles and dynamics of interpersonal communication;
- b. explaining the role of effective listening skills in the communication process
- c. discussing effective communication skills within different cultural contexts.

2. Students will demonstrate the ability to effectively manage conflict in a respectful and ethical manner in a variety of situations by:

- a. recognizing the importance of ethical behavior in personal and professional relationships and communications;
- b. applying the techniques of effective conflict management in class demonstrations and role-playing exercises
- c. using appropriate interpersonal communication skills and problem-solving techniques in a group setting.

3. Students will independently discern, formulate and critique an oral presentation by:

- a. presenting a clear, well-organized, and informative oral report based on personal research about an interpersonal communication problem or issue
- b. providing and accepting constructive evaluation.

1. Course Objectives: ‘Discourse Analysis’ is characterized by many linguists as the analysis of language above the level of the sentence. This course offers an overview of several of the major theoretical and methodological frameworks for doing discourse analysis in applied linguistics. With the presentation and discussion of each approach, students will have the opportunity to try out different methods for the analysis of discourse using the different theoretical perspectives and methodologies. Students will be asked to think about applications of the theories and methods to the world outside the university, especially to teaching.

2. Course Contents:

1. Defining discourse analysis: Texts and Genres
2. Genre analysis
3. Units of discourse
4. Narrative Readings
5. Practice CA analyses
